Students going to the Computer Lab at Collier Library will soon find it in a different place.

The computer lab will be moving from the second Floor to the ground floor of the library. A staff member said that it should be moving possibly within a week or two. The new lab will be located near a section of the periodicals stacks, where some of the study tables were.

He said that new computers have been bought, some of them with the same software, including Microsoft Office, in addition to two Macs. He also said that the new Lab will feature a better printer.

Students will also pay eight cents for each page printed by using their mane cards. The staff member warns that the ground floor may be somewhat noisier after the new lab is moved there.

He also said that some work will need to be done before the lab can be moved there. He said, "It's only a matter of wiring."
