

Dr. Warren appointed library dean

Dr. Garry Warren, the new dean of library services, said the "courteous, gracious people at UNA are one reason I came here."

He said many faculty members and students have brought gifts to his home, and some faculty gave a luncheon in his honor.

Dr. Warren said he thinks the most appealing thing about UNA is its size. "UNA is large enough to offer most of the advantages of a large university, yet small enough for personal attention for each student," he said.

Dr. Warren said the students are very courteous at UNA, and he enjoys working with them.

Dr. Warren is "very pleased" with the UNA library staff. He said "They are a very professional staff."

Dr. Warren said he hopes to continue to build on the positive experience of Collier Library, and he wants to strengthen the relationship between the library staff and the rest of the university community.

Dr. Warren's hobbies include running and working around his home as a handyman.

The Warren family includes his wife and their two sons. Mrs. Warren enjoys the family life in Florence and this location allows them to take frequent trips to Martin, Tennessee, Dr. Warren's hometown.

Dr. Warren said he looks forward to his future at UNA.
