

During National Library Week

Collier Library staff honors faculty authors

A coffee honoring 23 faculty authors was held last Thursday in Collier Library in observance of "National Library Week."

Librarian Ruth Dacus and members of the staff hosted the event. A special guest was Mrs. T.S. Stribling, wife of the late author who won the Pulitzer Prize in 1932 for "The Store," a novel set in Florence. Stribling attended UNA when it was State Normal School.

Faculty authors honored were Dr. D. Lee Allison, Dr. Milton L. Baughn, Dr. Michael W. Butler, Dr. Gerald Crawford, Dr. Bernarr Cresap, Dr. C. William Foster, Henry T. Harvey, Elizabeth C. Hill, Frank N. Himmler, Dr. Charles E. Joubert, Dr. Kenneth R. Johnson, Margaret Johnson, Doris H. Kelso, Dr. Arthur Richard Koch, Dr. Jeffrey A. Kottler, Dr. Jim T. McMinn, Maurine S. Maness, Dr. Jack H. Moore, Emily N. Richeson, Dr. George H. Robinson, Dr. Joseph C. Thomas, Dr. Elizabeth Wooldridge, and Dr. Paul Yokley, Jr.

AUTHORS HONORED--Among those honored at a recent coffee for faculty authors in Collier Library were, from left, Dr. Jeffrey A. Kottler, assistant professor of education; Dr. Charles E. Joubert, associate professor of psychology; and Mrs. Maurine S. Maness, associate professor of history. Twenty-three members of the UNA faculty have had either books or articles published in professional journals.

Hensley judges art

Fred Hensley, Assistant Professor of Art, was one of three judges for the Student Art Exhibition at Alabama A&M, Saturday, April 16.