Welcome to the Spring 2016 UNA Magazine. Spring is an amazing time to be on the beautiful campus of the University of North Alabama. Plants and flowers are in bloom, Harrison Plaza is packed with people enjoying the warm weather, and, for our seniors, graduation is only a short few weeks away.

Spring is also known as a time of growth. This is a timely and important theme, for in the past year UNA has seen significant progress in areas ranging from enrollment to facilities to academic programs. Our fall headcount increased to over 7,000 students and was followed by an equally strong showing in the spring term. Enrollment indicators are pointing toward an equally strong showing in the spring term.

Our academic programs continue to expand and thrive. Dr. Peter Rim has joined us from Virginia Tech to help start the extension and expansion of the College of Business and several other colleges, and this amazing university we call home. We feel blessed to be here and always try to do here, and that’s to provide a truly unique and comprehensive student experience and this just adds to that.”

From our family to yours, we wish you all the best and thank you for your continuing support of the University of North Alabama. Roar Lions.

Our academic programs continue to expand and thrive. Dr. Peter Rim has joined us from Virginia Tech to help start the extension and expansion of the College of Business and several other colleges.

We are also taking steps to add over 300 new parking spaces, most of which will be located off of Circular Road in the area formerly occupied by married student housing.

Our academic programs continue to expand and thrive. Dr. Peter Rim has joined us from Virginia Tech to help start the extension and expansion of the College of Business and several other colleges.

We also have a new major in the Master of Professional Studies (MPS) program. Beginning this summer, graduate students will be able to take courses in Higher Education Administration as part of the MPS degree.

Another measure of academic progress is the number of program accreditations received or in progress at UNA. This past year that number increased from eleven to thirteen with accreditation of programs in communications (ACEJMC) and interior design (CIDA). In addition, our College of Business just hosted a visiting team from the prestigious Association to Advance Collegiate Schools of Business (AACSB).

No listing of recent developments at UNA would be complete without mentioning the “Build the Pride” capital campaign. That campaign officially entered its public phase on March 21 with a gala held to celebrate the news that we have met and surpassed the initial fundraising goal of $25 million. This is truly news to celebrate! Campaign co-chairs Dr. Donald and Laura Harrison were on hand to commemorate the occasion and announce their own gift of $2.5 million toward the construction of the new nursing building. (Stay tuned for additional announcements on that project.) I wish to take this opportunity to thank the donors and university officials who worked so hard to initiate the campaign and get us to this point.

So what comes next? It would seem odd to end this campaign prematurely simply because it has been successful. Moreover, we owe future generations of UNA students a vision and boldness worthy of this institution, and with that commitment in mind I have announced the extension and expansion of the campaign with a new goal of $35 million.

We intend to meet this new goal by thinking strategically and creatively about opportunities to enhance educational opportunities for our students. As a case in point, our music program is second to none, but the facilities for that program are no longer adequate. We need a new recital hall to promote faculty and student performances and to strengthen the ties between campus and community. We need to raise funds to build out the new major in engineering technology as quickly as possible. Graduates from that program will be highly competitive in the job market and will drive economic change across north Alabama. We need to create an endowed Honors College to replace the existing Honors program that has served generations of high-achieving students at UNA. This step is essential if we are to compete for the best and brightest students from our service area and beyond.

Extracurricular activities must also be part of our vision. We need to think more systematically about the role private dollars can play in supporting faculty and student research, travel, and other scholarly endeavors. In athletics, our coaches and students are representing us well and competing at a championship level. But many of our athletic facilities are showing the signs of age. Learning is not confined to the classroom, and all of these activities help increase the visibility of UNA on the larger stage.

In closing, this publication marks a special time for the Kitts family as we wrap up our first year as members of the UNA family. We feel blessed to be here and have grown very fond of the Shoals and this amazing university we call home. Our furry neighbors are pretty cool as well.

From our family to yours, we wish you all the best and thank you for your continuing support of the University of North Alabama. Roar Lions.

With the warm temperatures, it feels as if spring has sprung on the University of North Alabama campus. But to officially kick off the season the UNA Student Government Association (SGA) decided to start a new campus tradition, “Light the Fountain.”

Harrison Fountain has become a signature piece on UNA’s already gorgeous campus. Each year, when the fountain is turned on, students and visitors alike know that warmer weather is on the way, and because of that, the SGA decided to make that the event a new tradition that will last for years to come.

For the inaugural lighting ceremony, Dr. Donald and Laura Harrison ('55), the patrons who provided the university with the fountain, were in attendance to turn on the water and lights and kick off the new tradition.

David Shields, UNA vice president for Student Affairs, said the event makes an excellent tradition on UNA campus. “Tradition is a big thing when it comes to universities, and we already have some really neat ones at the University of North Alabama like dipping your pencil in the fountain at the beginning of the year for good grades! Lighting the Fountain will fit in perfectly with what we always try to do here, and that’s to provide a truly unique and comprehensive student experience and this just adds to that.”

Shields said having the Harrisons in attendance for the inaugural event made it even more memorable.

University of North Alabama starts new tradition with ‘Light the Fountain’
The University of North Alabama announced this spring that over $25 million has been raised on the way to a goal of $35 million for UNA’s campaign, “Build the Pride.”

Officials with UNA’s Office of Advancement held a campaign gala to announce the start of the campaign’s public phase. The event included a live performance from UNA alumnus Dillon Hodges (’12) (Firekid). But the biggest performers of the night were UNA’s donors, who have already helped the university raise $23,217,884 during the silent phase.

UNA is well on its way to reaching the $35 million goal after it was announced that $5.5 million has been given to the College of Nursing. Campaign co-chairs Dr. Donald and Laura Harrison (’55) announced that they have contributed $2.5 million to name the new nursing building. The additional $3 million will be coming from the Anderson family of Florence, Alabama.

“The gifts from the Harrisons and the Andersons are monumental for this institution and for Nursing,” said UNA President Dr. Ken Kitts. “We’re amazed and so grateful for their generosity and we know that others will want to join with them as we take UNA to the next level.”

The Harrisons were in attendance at the gala and during their remarks noted that the new nursing building will officially be known as Harrison Hall. “We think our nursing program is the best in the state and one of the best in the country, and our facilities should reflect that,” Dr. Harrison said. “Our gift will go toward a state-of-the-art facility with equipped classrooms and modern laboratories. Harrison Hall will allow our faculty members and students to receive the finest training possible so that when they leave and conquer the world, they’ll be bringing a little bit of UNA with them.”

Nursing is not the only beneficiary of the “Build the Pride” campaign. During her remarks, Dr. Judy Jackson (’91 & ’02), interim vice president for University Advancement, discussed how the $25 million committed at this point has been designated. Approximately 30 percent is for scholarships, 48 percent will go to capital projects, 14 percent will go toward academic programs and 8 percent will go to athletics.

Jackson said additional projects include the construction of a new performing arts center, a heavier emphasis on programs like engineering technology and the entertainment industry/music, and enhancing the overall UNA student experience.
experience. Additionally, UNA will embark on a new journey to transition from the current Honors Program to a more prestigious Honors College.

“What we’re setting out to accomplish is massive in terms of this institution and this region,” said Dr. Deborah Shaw (’82), UNA alumna and Foundation Board member. “We believe this campaign will not only advance UNA to a point of national recognition, but it will also be a benefit for the area we call home, the Shoals. We have a great relationship with our surrounding area and if we benefit and grow, the area does as well. It’s a win-win for our students and residents,” she said.

The relationship between the university and the surrounding communities is a very important one for Dr. Ken Kitts, UNA president. Kitts said at the event that his main goals are to celebrate the Shoals, provide an extraordinary experience for students, and to tell UNA’s story.

“I think the kick-off of the public phase for this campaign does all three,” said Kitts. “We’re celebrating the heritage and work ethic of the region by starting new programs and supporting existing ones. We’re raising funds to provide our students with the ultimate experience, of which over $25 million has already been raised. And we’re letting everyone know that we’re one of the best institutions in the country thanks to our students, faculty/staff, alumni, friends, and donors.”

UNA College of Education and Human Sciences Finds New Home for HES

By Bryan Rachal, University Communications

After an extensive process, you might say the University of North Alabama College of Education and Human Sciences (COEHS) is a little like Goldilocks. After some sampling they found the building that’s just right:

Officials with the University announced that the Keystone building located on South Seminary Street in Florence will be the new home of the COEHS’s Department of Human Environmental Sciences (HES).

HES had been looking for a new location ever since the announcement was made that Floyd Hall would be coming down to make room for a new College of Education building. Floyd currently houses parts of the HES department, including child development, interior design, and merchandising, while the culinary arts, nutrition, and hospitality management programs are housed at UNA’s East campus location.

With the addition of this new building, the department of HES will now have room to include the culinary arts program in the Keystone building as well.

Dr. Donna Lefort, dean of the College of Education and Human Sciences, said the idea has always been to get everybody in HES together under one roof.

“We’ve always wanted to provide our students with a space that fits their needs,” Lefort said. “The Keystone building will be a perfect fit for us. The building is full of character, the location is amazing, and we’re sure that it will serve as an ideal creative space for students and faculty alike. Additionally, it will be a draw for incoming students when we show them their future work space in the heart of downtown Florence.”

The Keystone Building, built in 1917, was renovated in the early 2000s, but additional renovations will be needed to create classrooms and other spaces conducive to learning. Officials said they expect to begin moving into the Keystone building in January 2017, with the demolition of Floyd Hall expected to take place in February or March 2017.

UNA’s UPC Brings Ice Rink to Campus

By Bryan Rachal, University Communications

Ice skating outdoors in Alabama isn’t a very common occurrence, but it did take place on the University of North Alabama campus this past February in the GLC parking lot.

Members of UNA’s University Program Council (UPC) are responsible for bringing the ice rink to campus. UNA Director of Student Engagement Tyler Thompson said the rink was part of a series of events titled ’Snow Days.’

“The SGA University Program Council formed a special committee to create a series of special events to combat the winter slump,” Thompson said. “One of the ideas was to bring something really unique to campus. The committee did some research and discovered a company that would set up an Ice Rink on campus. When this was brought up to the different branches of Student Government, each time there was an overwhelming gasp of excitement, so it seemed that this event had truly struck a chord with students.”

UNA’s Master of Professional Studies Program Offers Concentration in Higher Education

By Bryan Rachal, University Communications

UNA has added a new specialization to the existing Master of Professional Studies program (MPS). Beginning this summer, graduate students will be able to take courses in Higher Education Administration as part of the MPS degree.

The new specialization focuses on students whose chosen career path will lead them to the American two- or four-year systems of higher education. The concentration will feature courses that focus on key aspects of higher education such as student development and student affairs, enrollment management and institutional marketing, NCAA athletics, contemporary and legal issues, administrative organization, budgetary planning, institutional evaluation, and the community college system.

Dr. Craig Robertson, chair of the Interdisciplinary and Professional Studies Department, said the beauty of the higher education specialization and the MPS degree in general is flexibility.

“Students can choose which higher education administration course they want and all courses are taught online by seasoned higher education professionals. Core classes in the MPS program are also available for students that prefer to attend actual physical classes,” said Robertson. “Because of that and the affordability of graduate studies at UNA, this concentration is ideal for those currently employed in higher education, who see higher education as part of a career move, or undergraduate students who are looking to excel in a college or university setting.”

UNA’s Master of Professional Studies degree is fully accredited by the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools. The program is a 33- to 36-credit-hour graduate degree program with a thesis or non-thesis option.
Dr. Lisa Kirch is quick to point out that she is a professor and doesn’t know why she should be interviewed. The fact of the matter is that Kirch is more than a professor in the art department at UNA; she is now among the elite who call themselves Fulbright Scholars.

Officials with the Institute of International Education (IIE) recently contacted Kirch to let her know that she was selected for a Fulbright Award to Germany. But Kirch said she still feels like she is working on it. “That is, where did museums come from? We know where they came from, but there is this little piece of time for which we don’t have concrete information, and I know of a document that provides that. So that’s what I’m going to be working on.”

Kirch said that document is an inventory of a room in Germany that could be considered a personal museum. Kirch said that she and a team of other researchers hope to publish an edition of the inventory of that room. “Basically what you have is someone in 1557 going into a room and writing down everything in that room. There are paintings in there, books, astronomical instruments, stuffed fish that the document said were hanging from the ceiling,” said Kirch. “There’s all this stuff that was in there and our project is to get people together who have different specialties.”

Once the research is completed, Kirch said the team will publish their edition in German with an English translation. In addition, they will also publish the essays that come out of the papers associated with a conference she is co-organizing. The real goal, according to Kirch, is to bring people together.

And while Kirch isn’t quick to toot her own horn, here are some stats related to Kirch. Kirch will join the ranks of heads of state, CEOs and university presidents, as well as leading journalists, artists, scientists and teachers. According to the Council for Interior Design Accreditation (CIDA), the University of North Alabama has met the standards required to become an accredited program. Students can now receive a Bachelor of Science in Human Environmental Sciences with a concentration in Interior Design. This achievement sets UNA apart, as the university is one of only four institutions of higher education in the state to offer the degree.

“Here at UNA, it’s huge,” said Jane Wilson, chair of Human Environmental Sciences at UNA. “Every time I think about it I get chills, and it should put us on the map throughout the state,” she said.

According to CIDA, the accreditation ensures that the institution’s interior design education prepares students to be responsible, well-informed, skilled professionals who make beautiful, safe, and comfortable spaces that also respect the earth and its resources. This is done by setting the standards for postsecondary education, evaluation of that education, and then outreach and collaboration with stakeholders in the interior design community.

College of Education and Human Sciences Dean Dr. Donna Lefort said that when you look at the other institutions that also have the CIDA accreditation, it shows just how committed UNA was to providing this caliber of program. “Comparatively speaking, if you look at Auburn or Samford, or some of these other schools that have much larger programs as far as enrollment resources, facilities etc., we were able to accomplish so much at UNA in Florence,” she said. “What’s amazing is that the institution has been so supportive of our endeavors, and so much so that we were able to overcome what some might consider obstacles: our size, our location, our resources in order to secure CIDA accreditation.” Lefort added that the department had previously secured National Kitchen and Bath Association Accreditation, making UNA’s the only program in Alabama that has both of those accreditations.

Lefort said another distinction that sets UNA apart is the fact that the interior design program also partners with the art department, which allows for an additional certification from the National Association of Schools of Art and Design (NASAD).

RANKS AMONG TOP STUDENT NEWSPAPERS

By Scott Morris, Student Media Adviser

The Flor-Ala and The Roar-Ala ranked among the top five student publications in the region at the 2016 Southeast Journalism Conference at Austin Peay State University in Clarksville, Tennessee.

The two student-led publications at the University of North Alabama competed against 35 colleges and 441 entries in the SEJC annual Best of the South competition.

The Roar-Ala magazine, which The Flor-Ala staff produces and distributes annually to incoming students through the university’s Student Orientation Advisement and Registration program (SOAR), ranked fourth for Best College Magazine.

The Flor-Ala ranked fifth for Best College Newspaper.

The following Flor-Ala student staff members also received honors at the SEJC:

• Former Page Designer SHILO CUPPLES, Best Newspaper Page Layout Designer, first place
• Editor-in-Chief KALI DANIEL, Best News Graphic Designer, second place
• Former Associate Sports Editor KADIN POUNDERS, Best Sports Writer, third place
• Managing Editor JASMINE FLEMING, Best Opinion/Editorial Writer, eighth place

The University of North Alabama College of Business now offers two new concentrations in its MBA program, which is also considered one of the most affordable programs in the country. Students can now receive a graduate degree in Human Resources or Innovation Economic Development.

In addition to the concentration in Human Resources, starting this spring UNA students will have the opportunity to receive an MBA with an emphasis in Innovative Economic Development. The program equips economic development professionals with a deep understanding of the role of innovation and how it enhances economic growth. Students in the program will learn how to craft strategies, policies, and platforms that will support the acceleration of innovation and economic growth and the quality-of-life improvements that result when communities and regions create vibrant innovation ecosystems.

And to make the program more appealing, UNA was recently singled out by BestMastersDegrees.com as having one of the most affordable online MBA programs in the country.

The following Flor-Ala student staff members also received honors at the SEJC:

• Former Page Designer SHILO CUPPLES, Best Newspaper Page Layout Designer, first place
• Editor-in-Chief KALI DANIEL, Best News Graphic Designer, second place

• Managing Editor JASMINE FLEMING, Best Opinion/Editorial Writer, eighth place

The University of North Alabama “Pride of Dixie” Marching Band has received recognition from the College Band Directors National Association (CBDNA) as an exemplary collegiate marching program.

Dr. Lloyd Jones ’92 & ’98, director of bands at UNA, was invited to present a video of the band and speak about the processes and procedures used by the “Pride of Dixie” at the CBDNA conference.

“This is indeed a great honor to be recognized by others in the collegiate band ranks as one of the best,” said Jones. “Our students work diligently to produce a quality product that represents UNA in the finest manner. I am very proud for our students to receive this recognition. This would not be possible without the support of our alumni, administrators, and faculty.”

University marching band programs from across the Southeast were invited to submit videos of their performances to the CBDNA committee for consideration.

“The committee had a very difficult time in making the selections. All of the ensembles were incredibly,” said Randall Coleman, associate director of bands at the University of Alabama and member of the CBDNA committee.

Of all the programs submitted, the UNA “Pride of Dixie” was the only NCAA Division II band selected to be highlighted at the conference, which was held in Charleston, South Carolina. Receiving this national recognition is not only important for the band program, but also for the university as a whole.

“This is a wonderful commentary on Dr. Jones and our students, and it represents great exposure for UNA as well,” said UNA President Ken Kitts. “This isn’t the first time the ‘Pride of Dixie’ has received national recognition. The band has performed at many state, regional, and national venues in recent years, including two appearances at the Bands of America Southeast Super Regional in the Atlanta Georgia Dome and two appearances at the Bands of America Grand National Championships in Indianapolis, Indiana, where the band performed for more than 20,000 spectators in Lucas Oil Stadium, home of the Indianapolis Colts.”

The University of North Alabama Department of History honored the late professor Dr. Lawrence J. Nelson with a memorial lecture series. The inaugural event took place in the Communications Building on campus.

The first lecture featured speaker Edward Ayers, a renowned historian of the American South, former president of the University of Richmond, recipient of the National Humanities Medal in 2013, and current co-host of NPR’s Backstory with the American History Guys. Ayers’ talk is titled “The Mystery of the Civil War”.

Dr. Matthew Schoenbachler ’89, a professor in the University of North Alabama Department of History, said that Nelson, who was a professor at UNA for 10 years, had a profound impact on many students and colleagues during that time, and that’s why they wanted to honor him with a lecture series.

“He had an enormous effect on many people, including myself,” said Schoenbachler.

“When I came to UNA in the mid-80s, I was a music major. But I wandered into Dr. Nelson’s class and was blown away. I became a history major because of that, and I guess you could say the rest is history.”
Coming from a city like Istanbul with a population in the tens of millions (more than the entire state of Alabama), Cagri Bagioğlu ’99 & ’00 knew that life in the Shoals area would be different. He was introduced to a system that really prides itself on the personalized attention provided by faculty and staff. As a transfer student, he was a little older than most freshmen, and the pace of life and the warm hospitality of Florence residents put him at ease. A combination of all of these factors—the people, the campus, the quality of education, safety, and even the climate—made his decision to come to UNA very easy. Fast-forward 15 years and meet UNA’s first international student to receive the Alumni of the Year Award.

Bagioğlu said, “UNA has had such an influence on what I do now, really on who I am. I know there are parts of me that were shaped by the experience of entering as an international student, then working to serve and to bring international students to UNA. UNA was my first full-time job, and it was where I developed my passion for higher education and the difference it can make in people’s lives. Working for President Potts and Dr. Howard was an amazing experience which I give thanks for every single day.”

Bagioğlu moved back to Istanbul with his wife, Cindy and son, Jonathon. It has been seven years since they moved; their daughter Adelia was born in Istanbul six years ago. They attend Turkish schools and are learning Turkish, and Jon just started with German this year. The whole family is active in Cub Scouts and Girl Scouts. They are tourists in their own city, visiting the historical sights, museums, and just walking by the water.

Bagioğlu is a member of the Board of Trustees at Istanbul Bilgi University, the only Turkish member of the Laureate International Universities since 2006. In this position, he serves as the Chief Operating Officer for the University, which has over 16,000 students, 20,000 alumni, 1,500 employees, and close to a 100 million USD operating budget. Bagioğlu previously was the Secretary General of the University, where he was primarily responsible for business development, marketing and campus operations. He played a key role, during which enrollment was doubled, over 50 new degree programs added, and international accreditation/quality projects were initiated.

Bagioğlu said, “Being involved in a fast-paced and ever changing system I get to see how higher education touches the lives of not only the students who attend our school, our faculty and staff, but their families. Knowing that these students will go on to shape the future of Turkey and their home countries is a great feeling. As a part of my job I not only work with academicians, regulators, global partners, and accreditors but a variety of stakeholders, which allows me to learn something new every day and continue to develop myself.”

He said, “I was so excited to return for Homecoming. As we approached Florence, after almost 10 years away, I really was flooded with all the memories of this place that is so dear to my heart. The alumni banquet, the Homecoming parade, the game, but more importantly, seeing old friends—being with my Alabama family was priceless. Walking the halls where I took classes, or Rogers Hall where I first worked, Powers Hall which we transformed into the Center for International Programs, I had the joy of seeing some of my favorite people. The campus looks more beautiful than ever but the biggest surprise of all was when Leo III and Una recognized me. I was a Lion Crew member and I spent many hours helping to care for them when they first arrived up through my departure. They, too, are part of my extended family, my UNA family.”
Stan Patterson (’89) returned to Florence and the University of North Alabama to celebrate an Alumni of the Year award with his family, friends, and fraternity brothers. Raised in Florence, growing up he was influenced by his grandfather William Patterson from Sheffield and his parents Eddie and Ingrid Patterson, he intended to play football when he entered UNA but because of an injury was unable to reach that goal. Today he gives thanks for his athletic department experience, and acknowledges his appreciation for his influences in the HPER department, his fraternity brothers in Sigma Alpha Epulon, and his family.

Patterson is a nationally recognized inventor, certified prosthetist, and founder of Prosthetic & Orthotic Associates (POA), and is known for his revolutionary strides in prosthetic design. He graduated from UNA with a Bachelor of Science degree in Secondary Education, and earned his certification in prosthetics from the American Board for Certification in 1994. He has founded and managed several prosthetic patient care facilities since 1997. In 1999, Patterson founded POA of Central Florida in the Orlando area.

POA employs the most advanced techniques known in the precision fitting and fabrication of prostheses. A highly respected speaker at national prosthetic and orthotic conferences, Patterson has served as an adjunct professor for Otto Bock Healthcare and TEC Interface Systems. He was honored by the American Academy of Orthotists and Prosthetists as the recipient of the 2007 Clinical Commitment Award at their 33rd Annual Meeting in San Francisco, Calif. In July 2012, Patterson was elected, by unanimous consent, to a three-year term as a member of the Orlando Science Center Board of Trustees. He works with Wounded Warriors and the Department of Defense.

Patterson likes to take a “whole body” approach to patient care, which is why they offer a fully equipped fitness center, a golf training center, and a traverse rock climbing wall. Another asset POA’s expansive building offers is the chance for patients to share experiences and encourage each other. Walking into the facility you see a virtual who’s who on the over-sized photographic wall of fame success stories. His heart is in helping others, and POA sees patients of all ages and activity levels. Whether you are in need of a prosthesis that will simply allow you to move around your home, or one that will make running a 26.2 mile marathon possible, they will find the perfect fit. The staff is truly committed to ensuring that each patient is able to live his or her life without limits, achieving this with unrivaled patient care and innovative technologies.

It’s through Patterson that his patients have come to believe the philosophy, too. When he founded POA, he made himself a promise: He would never turn anyone away because of the inability to pay. “We put the patients’ needs first,” he said. “We do not set compensation as our main goal. We do what is right, and the compensation follows.”

“Everyone is treated like family — staff and patients alike — and once a patient becomes established here, they pay it forward by welcoming and making new patients comfortable.”

Patterson lives in Orlando, Fla., with his wife, Beth Patterson (’88) and their three canine children - Kopa, Sarabi, and “Z.”
Dr. Mitch Burford (‘81) began his service to the University in 1947 as a member of the Pride of Dixie Band, Collegiate Singers, and Student Government Association. He was named to Who’s Who among Students and graduated in 1951 with a Bachelor of Science with a double major in biology and chemistry minor in mathematics. Dr. Burford chose to pursue his doctorate of medicine from the University of Tennessee in 1957. In his work as a career pathologist for Eliza Coffee Memorial Hospital, Dr. Burford contributed to the betterment of this community and to the improvement of individual health and well being. Dr. Burford’s commitment to his undergraduate alma mater has led to his involvement in the UNA President’s Cabinet for former President Robert Potts and countless monetary donations towards the improvement of university facilities as well as the lion mascots.

In particular, Dr. Burford has expressed particular commitment to the music and science departments at UNA. His name is on the biology wing of UNA’s new science and technology building and he funded the purchase of the nuclear magnetic resonance spectrometer (NMRS) equipment—use of this equipment is integral to the university’s mission of teaching and research.

Dr. Ben Baker (‘98) is from Martin, Tenn., where he was well-rounded as both a good athlete and a good academic student. After graduating from Martin High School and attending the University of Tennessee at Martin, he joined his father in one of the local banks. Ben rose from teller to Chief Executive Officer of the City State Bank in nine years. He eventually worked for almost twenty years in banking. Then President Robert L. Potts gave Ben an opportunity in 1994 to join the financial aid office at UNA. At UNA, he saw many students who had not enjoyed the abilities or opportunities he had enjoyed as a West Tennessee teenager. Many of the UNA students coming to Ben’s office were either academically challenged or financially challenged, or both. Ben made it his mission to help UNA students in any way possible.

Brenda Baker, a native of southern middle Tennessee, spent 20 years in the banking industry before coming to Florence. After graduating from the Tennessee Bankers School at Vanderbilt University, she thought she would finish her entire working career in banking, and then she met Ben. Banking is what brought Ben and Brenda to Florence. Then President Robert Potts asked Ben in 1993, and now 23 years later, Brenda has enjoyed working in the President’s Office with five presidents including two interim presidents. Many changes have taken place since she stepped foot on campus, but one thing has remained constant, and that is her love for the students, faculty, and staff. Over the years she has formed relationships that will last a lifetime. The reward for Brenda has been the satisfaction of knowing that she has been able to help students, faculty, and staff members, even if, as the modestly says, only in some small way.

Josh Willingham is from Florence where he played high school baseball and basketball at Mars Hill Bible School before enrolling at UNA. He played shortstop and was a two-time All-Gulf South Conference selection (1999, 2000) and a two-time American Baseball Coaches Association All American.

He is a member of Sigma Chi fraternity, Erta Rho Chapter. He played Major League Baseball for the Florida Marlins, Washington Nationals, and Oakland Athletics, and he retired last year from a pinnacle year with the Kansas City Royals culminating his baseball career with a trip to the World Series. Josh and wife Ginger make their home in the Shoals, along with their three sons, Rhett, Ryder and Rogan. Committed to giving back to the community they love, Josh and Ginger launched The Josh Willingham Foundation as a way to organize those efforts. The primary purpose is to (1) provide support, education, clothing and other assistance to at-risk children, (2) educate the public and professionals about at-risk children and the actions that can be taken to help at-risk children and (3) provide support to charitable organizations that combat child abuse, provide educational support to children, and help research cares to childhood diseases and assist children with such diseases.

Kathy Hays (‘78 and ‘86) has dedicated her life to serving her community through her ability to teach as well as write. Ms. Hays received her Bachelor of Science in Education from UNA in 1978, focusing primarily on majors in both English and sociology. message from the
ALUMNI PRESIDENT

It takes 10 million failures to find the right stuff."

The late, great UNA alumnus George Lindsey (’52) found his passion and worked tirelessly to succeed in the entertainment business. Why do I mention his words and remind you about his history? Every alumnus of our University has something in their lives they love, they identify with, and they are passionate about. None of us earned a degree without a drive to fulfill our academic obligations, and we then transitioned to the next phase of our lives to leave our marks on the world. While the roads that each of us have taken since graduation are undoubtedly different, we all have one thing in common. We are proud graduates of a great public university in the heart of the Shoals – the University of North Alabama.

The University helped shape us. We not only received a first-class education, but our time here also helped us grow socially and make long-lasting friendships. When we were on campus as students we bought into this philosophy. It was easy to do so. We were physically on campus, attending some combination of classes, athletic events, and social activities on a regular basis. We were invested for two reasons. We wanted to be involved and soak in the full college experience, and, secondarily, it was easy to be active and stay connected because we were already on campus. Fast forward to graduation. It was the end of each of our respective journeys as students at UNA.
We’d earned the right to be called alumni. After the post-graduation parties, some of us stayed in the Shoals, while others moved out of the city, state, or country. While we all love UNA, it became much more difficult to be invested in the University primarily because we were no longer on campus every day. Our continued education, careers, families, and many other things in our lives filled our time. UNA became a great memory but, for many, staying active was not something we could do on a regular basis. I get it. We all do.

I want to challenge you to find a way to get back on campus and re-ignite the passion that made you love UNA in the first place. UNA gave something special to each of us. I want this to be the time that each of us pays it forward. I am not asking you to write a check to the University. That would be great if you are able and want to do that, but that is not what I am talking about. I want each of us to find a way to get back on campus in-person once, twice, or dozens of times in 2016. Come back to baseball, softball, basketball, football, volleyball, soccer, and other games to support our teams that are competitive on the national level every season of the year; come back to speak or teach in a class in your field of expertise; come back for special events like Homecoming, Derby Day, Lions Under the Lights, Front Porch Storytelling Festival, and concerts; come back to visit and help your fraternity, sorority, band, campus ministries and local churches, and other university groups that were involved and soak in the full college experience, and, secondarily, it was easy to do so. We were already on campus. Fast forward to graduation. It was the end of each of our respective journeys as students at UNA.

advisor you have lost touch with over the years. Whatever your passion, however you can pay it forward, come back! Being on UNA campus is good for your soul, and it will be good for the current students to see you paying it forward to the next generation of Lions. You may even have a young Lion in your family that one day decides to follow in your steps and enroll as a student at our University. Let your kids and grandkids see first-hand why you have so much pride in the purple and gold. On behalf of the UNA Alumni Association, I want you to know that you are welcome and wanted on our campus.
We will see you soon.

Roar Lions!
Douglas B. Harpert, ’02, 2015-2016 Alumni Association President

Douglas Harpert ’02
UNA Alum Danny Vinson ’77 is a favorite truly Southern character actor in a career that started in 1994. He wears many faces and is seen on the big screen, on television, and in commercials with some of our favorite leading stars. With a major in marketing and management and minors in economics, finance and dramatic arts, his studies at UNA were as varied as his career. After graduation Danny spent eighteen years working for three Fortune 500 companies before becoming a full time actor.

His film career is in full swing and he has worked opposite some of the biggest names in Hollywood, after beginning his acting career in a UNA theatre production of My Three Angels with Sal Mineo, Broderick Crawford, and Peter Breck. Some of his film work includes: Walk the Line; Talladega Nights, the Ballad of Ricky Bobby; U.S. Marshalls; When I Find the Ocean; Honeydripper; Leatherheads; The Curious Case of Benjamin Button; East Bound & Down; Astronauts Wives Club; A Walk in the Woods; 42; Neyland; YellaWood; Nashville; The Longest Ride; Woodlawn; Army Wives; The Walking Dead; and Get Low.

These days as the natural Southern accent seems to give way to a “Hollywood hick” accent, Vinson’s voice and genuine charm will keep this boy from Alabama giving reality to viable roles in productions set below the Mason-Dixon line. His rugged looks have cast him in blockbuster and award-winning films, and his diverse talent defies type casting as he portrays cowboys, lawyers, FBI agents, priests, coaches, cab drivers, soldiers, senators, and more. With a timeless look and multiple dialects, Danny easily slips into any era and continues to showcase his skill on great productions. According to his résumé his special skills include: crying on cue, rappelling, horseback riding, roping, guitar playing, wagon driving, working with a teleprompter, working with firearms, and water and snow skiing.

Danny loves UNA and credits much of his success as an actor to his start at UNA and the mentoring of faculty in the theater department. Danny’s achievements in the field of acting, his character and his contributions have brought many positive accolades to the university. Vinson said, “I am not unlike any other actor. I enjoy playing characters. The theatre work I got to do inside UNA’s Norton Auditorium was where that first happened in front of an audience. The instruction I received from the drama department, particularly from Robert Allen Holder and the late Jim Davis, provided knowledge, support, and confidence that I still depend on today for my work!”

Danny has for many years played a role as an active volunteer with the George Lindsey UNA Film Festival committee. He is a frequent presenter and speaker at the annual Film Festival, having judged, entered films, presented awards, taught workshops, worked on panels, and emceed the Awards Show.
ALUMNI RETURNS WITH PIRATES

The ‘Pirates of the Caribbean’ made a big splash on the Norton Stage when the Shoals Symphony at UNA provided the sounds and intersected with the sights of the full-length Disney production. The joint endeavor with the community, alumni, faculty, students, and friends of the University showcased a magical experience for the sold-out Norton Auditorium crowd.

Dr. Daniel Stevens, music director and conductor, said, “Having performed ‘Pirates of the Caribbean’ in my past career as a full-time orchestral musician, I knew that this would be an excellent show to energize the Shoals and help our community see the Shoals Symphony at UNA as a must-see event. As I reached out to Disney to contract the rights to the show, Royd Haston ‘96 got on the line and said, ‘The University of North Alabama? That is my alma mater, and I would love to bring Pirates to my home. It has been 20 years since I was back with my host family, working hard on my musical skills in the music building practice rooms. Let’s see what we can do to bring Disney to Florence.”

“It was my honor to work with Royd over the past year to bring Pirates of the Caribbean to Florence with the Shoals Symphony at UNA,” said Dr. Stevens. “He inspired countless volunteers, musicians, donors, board members, faculty, and UNA students to reach for a dream unachievable by one person alone. He embraces the vision to bring people together in unity to celebrate our bright musical heritage and prove that the arts are thriving in the Shoals.”

Along with the musicians of the Shoals Symphony at UNA, a men’s chorus made up of UNA vocal students (under the direction of Dr. Ian Loepky), a dedicated keyboard with musical cues, and an SFX sound effects package from Disney provided a genuine, complete soundtrack. This unique concert experience came to the Shoals in large part thanks to UNA graduate Royd Haston, a commercial music major while at UNA, who went to Los Angeles 20 years ago for a two-month internship with Leiber and Stoller Music Publishing and has served the music industry in California ever since.

Haston is the music manager for the Disney Music Group, the music production arm of the Walt Disney Company. His job involves putting together major orchestral concerts that perform all over the world. His latest projects have traveled to major performing venues in Paris and London, and major orchestral halls around the US.

Royd said, “Being back on campus after two decades was a surreal experience. There were so many things that were familiar. But the campus and in fact the entire town was dotted with so much new. I mourned the fact that I couldn’t go to Court Street Café or Biscuit Village but was blown away by the variety and ‘hipness’ of all the new restaurants that were downtown. There is definitely a cool vibe there.”

“Walking on campus was a blast of nostalgia mixed with a lot of ‘when did that get here!’ I enjoyed going into the choir room and seeing students gathered around the piano working on their parts and I enjoyed going into the old practice rooms and remembering that feeling of ‘we got to finish getting that song memorized before my jury!’ But the new student building was so cool. And yes I did enjoy my chicken sandwich!”

Royd continued, “I was so impressed with the Entertainment Industry Center (EIC). The students have access to so much. The Music Room, the staff, the studio being in the Shoals Area and the proximity to Nashville really has to make that program a beacon to any aspiring musician or entertainment career-minded students. And that has to be for not only those in close proximity to the university but for anyone in the entire state.”

He was pleased with the show. “And I can’t say enough about the Shoals Symphony at UNA and their performance of Pirates of the Caribbean. What a great show. Everything went so well. The sound, the professionalism of the musicians and the choir as well as the stage workers really made the night seem effortless and easy. I was very impressed. It was really easy to brag to my co-workers once I got back to Disney Studios about what you guys did.”

Royd will definitely be returning to his alma mater. “It was an amazing trip and I look forward to seeing you all again at the next Disney performance.”

MOVE BRINGS UNEXPECTED BLESSING

By Ann McCutcheon

We met Royd through our son, Mark. They were in a band that was just starting and their landlord wanted to move them out so he could live there. So, Mark moved back home and asked if Royd could move in as well. We had three empty bedrooms so we said ‘yes.’ We agreed on an amount which almost paid for the many showers, food, etc., and we got the bonus of having the band reharse in our basement.

Royd was no problem but became a part of the family. We had a lot of new friends who would end up around our dining table, either eating, or playing cards or board games, or just hanging out. It was a very enjoyable time for us.

Royd had lost his father in an automobile accident before he came to UNA. His mother was an invalid and had nurses around the clock. During the time he lived with us, she died. Mark went down to Mobile with him for the funeral and we realized at that time why God had moved him in with us. That’s why we call him our adopted son. But he was more blessing to us than we could have known.

Since its construction in 1939, only two sets of children have had the unique experience of living in the President’s Home here on campus. Up until May of last year, the campus had only been “home” to the children of Dr. Ethelbert B. Norton. However, the inauguration of our new President, Dr. Kenneth Kitts, has welcomed home two new young residents to the campus.

Mack, Betty, and Bert Norton resided primarily in the President’s Home until Betty married in 1959. Betty, the youngest of the Norton children, attended Kilby School from 3rd to 6th grade. She remembers attending gymnastics at Norton children, attended Kilby School from 3rd to 6th grade. She remembers attending gymnastics and participating in other activities: “Kilby at that time was behind Wesleyan Hall, in what later became the math building.” Betty also remembers playing the role of a “little hostess” at dinners and receptions hosted at the President’s house.

“Somehow my brothers never seemed to attend these gatherings, but I sat through many guest dinners,” she said. “Every fall there was a reception for incoming freshmen at the President’s Home, as well as one for the outgoing seniors in the spring. There were no hotels or motels in those days, so if a commencement speaker or any other such guest came from any distance, they usually spent the night in our guest room.”

While Bert was college-aged for most of his father’s presidential career, he often reminisces of the days often mention spending time in the large front yard and “bunny hopping” around the house.

The Norton children also attended a multitude of campus events and ceremonies. “So far as I know, we never missed a play, concert, commencement, or convocation. We also attended all the rentals and home football and basketball games,” Betty said.

Bert particularly remembers the athletic events hosted on campus. “The college had no active football program until Dad got it started about 1949. Once the program began I attended almost every home game. I also attended most of the basketball games in the old gymnasium on campus and some of the baseball games on a field that I think was in North Florence.”

Colin and Corbin Kitts moved into the President’s Home in May of 2015, making them the youngest children to ever live in the home, and the first children to live there since the youngest of the Norton children left in 1958. Both Colin and Corbin attend Kilby School, with Colin in the fourth grade and Corbin enrolled in the kindergarten class. Their experience at Kilby, along with their time spent on campus, has made for a wonderful first year in the President’s Home.

The Kitts boys have enjoyed the opportunity to host student groups in their new home alongside their parents. Groups include the LaGrange Society Ambassadors, SGA, Interior Design students, and others. In beginning new traditions in their home, the Kitts enjoyed their first Christmas here on campus with “Elfe,” the boy’s Elf on the Shelf. “The added tradition helped to make the season bright,” and mess’y, at times,” said their mother, Dena Kitts. Colin and Corbin also enjoy having friends over for slumber parties and to play in the large front yard, playing ball, sword fighting with sticks, and chasing squirrels. The boys and their friends often use the large magnolia tree off the left of the house as a fort.

“The campus is always alive when the students are around, and the boys enjoy watching them walk to class or wait for the shuttle,” Dena said. Occasionally, students passing by will stop to speak to the boys or even join in on a game of football. Colin and Corbin can also be seen on campus riding their bicycles. “They race around Harmon Plaza and speed down the walkways near the GUC. Corbin is still on training wheels, so many times, spectators get a glimpse of me running behind him, holding onto the back of his shirt to prevent a wipe-out!”

Colin and Corbin particularly enjoy campus events, including the Shoals Symphony at UNA’s Pirates of the Caribbean. Corbin actually began to emulate Dr. Daniel Stevens’ conducting. They enjoyed the UNA percussion concert. “One piece featured playing a conch shell. Both boys were in awe of that!” Dena said. They also have enjoyed several multicultural events with international students. This past summer, the boys enjoyed getting to meet a group of students from China, and even prepared to greet them with phrases such as “Nice to meet you!” in Chinese.

Students have thoroughly enjoyed the experience of having the boys on campus this past year. “It’s fun to walk around campus and see them riding their bikes or throwing the football around,” said Anna Long, a junior nursing student and LaGrange Ambassador. “Their being here is just another thing to add to the list of what makes this university so unique.”
UNA Nursing Alum Finds Calling with OptimComfort Medical Chair

By Bryan Rachal, University Communications

University of North Alabama College of Nursing alumna Angela Howard ’07 actually began her journey at a different institution, Itawamba Community College. Howard graduated with an Associate Degree of Applied Science in Nursing while working as a nursing assistant and raising 2-year-old identical twins.

Howard, a first-generation college student, enrolled in UNA’s Bachelor of Nursing program in 2006, with the desire to further her nursing education.

“I did complete the degree entirely online,” said Howard. “I had divorced in January 2004, so while I was completing the program at UNA I was a single mother with no support from my family. I also held a full-time weekend position as RN Supervisor at a residential psychiatric treatment facility for adolescents and two part-time jobs during the week.”

Howard managed to find success in the program despite her hectic schedule and was able to apply for a job that required a BSN. Her job was to assist in creating life care plans for individuals with chronic illnesses and traumatic personal injuries. “I worked with a wide variety of patients, including burn victims, amputees, traumatic brain injuries, and spinal cord injuries,” said Howard.

With that experience under her belt, Howard went on to complete the certification process in 2009, passing the international boards as a Certified Life Care Planner (CLCP).

“Being a single mother, I continued to work three jobs,” she said. “I began working as a life care planner and continued my case management jobs with hospice and the Mississippi Department of Rehabilitation. I also did short-term travel assignments, working as a case manager on the heart and lung transplant floor at Temple University in Philadelphia and as a psychiatric nurse in Modesto, California.”

“It was during this time that Howard said she initially began thinking of the medical chair that would change her life. Howard had grown up with a great aunt who was born with severe cerebral palsy and at a young age Howard learned how to lift her out of an upright chair that she described as ‘very rigid and very institutional-looking.’

Howard said she had always felt sorry for her great aunt, as the chair looked very uncomfortable. “In my work as a nurse, I continued to lift my patients just as I had learned to lift my great aunt,” she said. “Most of my patients suffered from severe musculoskeletal impairments, so the full weight of their bodies would often rest in my arms. I would also often walk into a patient’s home or hospital room to find them sitting in a slumped position.”

Howard said she began educating patients’ families on the risks of placing pillows around their loved ones to keep them propped up since this can often increase the risk for pressure sores. “It was during that time that she said she had an epiphany of sorts, what if there were a chair that could be designed to support the trunk/core of the body?”

Howard said she thought this type of chair might “alleviate some of these problems and help patients maintain a more proper body alignment.”

But when Howard searched to find a chair to fit these needs, there wasn’t one to be found.

Howard’s best friend’s mother became one of her hospice patients. The woman was a stroke/dementia patient and had declined to the point where she no longer had the ability to sit in a straighly aligned position in her chair.

“One day I entered her room as her nurse and found my friend standing at her mother’s side in tears,” said Howard. “Her mother sat extremely slumped over and had aspirated shortly after lunch due to improper positioning. Knowing my friend as I did, I knew that she would do whatever was necessary to provide the best for mom.”

Howard said she decided then, with the help of her friend, to take the next step and design a chair that they could have specially built. Howard said she purchased poster board and sketched her chair, the chair that would eventually become the OptimComfort Medical Chair.

Howard and her friend then filed for a patent. Within six months they had two separate pending patents, and in late 2014 they were granted two official patents for the OptimComfort chair.

“One patent was granted for the custom design of the back of the chair and the other for positioning aids that allow individuals with the most extreme disabilities the comfort of sitting in a standard piece of furniture versus being confined to a wheelchair,” said Howard. “The specially designed chair back is what makes it work, according to Howard. “It’s a concave shape and has customized lumbar support which,” she said, “allows individuals to be able to sit in a more upright position, helping to alleviate pressure on the entire spine.”

The chair also has a pillow that is weighted in a special way, making it easily adjustable for the individual user.

“The OptimComfort chair is also the only chair on the market that is not composed of blow fiber,” Howard said. “Our chair is constructed with a solid wood frame and dense poly foam that is cut on a contouring machine so that it does not lose its shape. The poly is covered with the highest quality memory foam so that it conforms to the body of each individual user.”

The original chair was designed with two motors to allow for infinite positioning, including sitting, reclining, flat lying, Trendelenburg, and a lift position. However, the simple comfort and contemporary style of the chair brought demand for a non-powered recliner for individuals who just wanted comfort. This led to the design of a typical furniture model manufactured with Howard’s patented back.

But Howard’s work with the chair didn’t stop with her design, she decided to manufacture the chair as well. “My business partner and I agreed to lease an unoccupied manufacturing facility that was already set up and took only a small amount of work to move into.”

Howard said they began dealing directly with suppliers and found their own employees and now Howard and her business partner own the manufacturing facility. Their official production start date was Feb. 9, 2015, and she said they’ve already surpassed their conservative business plan and look forward to more growth in the coming years.

“I credit the University of North Alabama in large part for the sense of empowerment that took me to the levels of my career that led to the development of OptimComfort,” said Howard. “The flexibility of being able to complete the RN-to-BSN program entirely online was the only way I could have achieved this degree—I had no choice but to work multiple jobs while solely raising my children. The superior quality of the administration and nursing faculty at UNA forced me to be my best.”

ENDOWED SCHOLARSHIPS

VisioNAry gifts

Overall, $25,000 is required to endow a scholarship within the University of North Alabama Foundation. Before the endowment reaches the minimum of $25,000, all gifts are added to the principal. After the endowment reaches the minimum of $25,000, only a portion of the invested income earned each year is spent while the remainder is added to the principal. An endowment may result in tax savings and other financial benefits that may enable you to give more than you might have thought possible.

After the endowment reaches the minimum of $25,000, only a portion of the invested income earned each year is spent while the remainder is added to the principal. An endowment is a perpetual gift because only a portion of the earnings is used to support the intended purpose while the principal continuously grows. In compliance with the university's endowment spending plan, earnings from the endowment will be used to fund the scholarship award in the name of the donor. The $25,000 can be given over a three- to five-year period or in one lump sum. Once funds are endowed, they cannot be retrieved from an endowment. If the donor is unable to reach the $25,000 minimum over five years, the endowment will transfer into a general endowment pool, thus losing its identity with the donor.

The process for creating a scholarship is as follows:

- Contact the Office of Advancement where the scholarship coordinator will work with the donor and the appropriate gift office and dean to create an agreement for the scholarship.
- Once all parties have approved the draft, the final agreement is signed in triplicate and signed by the donor, the Office of University Advancement, and University President.

For additional information about establishing a scholarship, contact Deborah Hensley, UNA Box 5113, Florence, Alabama, 35682, or dhensley@una.edu.

ENDOWED SCHOLARSHIPS

Endowed funds differ from others in that they are truly the gift that keeps giving. Instead of the gift being spent outright, the total amount of the gift is invested. Perhaps the most rewarding aspect of establishing an endowment is that it allows you to directly accomplish your philanthropic goals while helping the university. The reasons for creating a named endowment are varied: the satisfaction of supporting academic excellence, the pleasure of honoring a spouse, family member, or colleague in a way that is meaningful to him or her, or the comfort of memorializing a loved one with a living legacy. Additionally, creating an endowment may result in tax savings and other financial benefits that may enable you to give more than you might have thought possible.

ATHLETIC HALL OF FAME INDUCTS
FEARS, JONES, OGLESBY and SLOAN as Class of 2015

The twenty-sixth class of inductees for the University of North Alabama Athletic Hall of Fame included baseball All-American Chris Fears, volleyball standout Doris Jones who helped lead the Lions to three Gulf South Conference Championships, football All-American and National Football League veteran Evan Oglesby and the late Alex Sloan, who began the school’s highly successful men’s golf program in 1958 and coached the Lions for 16 years.

The 2015 induction class brings the total number of inductees into the UNA Athletic Hall of Fame to 122.

Chris Fears (’02), a native of Ozark, Mo., lettered two years in baseball for the Lions and was a two-year starter in the outfield in 1999 and 2000. He helped lead UNA to a combined 81-28-1 record in his two seasons with the Lions, including the 1999 Gulf South Conference Championship, an NCAA South Region Championship and a berth in the Division II World Series. The Lions were ranked as high as No. 2 in the nation in 1999 and No. 8 in 2000. Fears spent three years in the minor leagues before graduating from UNA with a Bachelor of Business Administration (BBA) degree and adding a Master of Business Administration (MBA) degree from UNA in New Venture Management. He is currently a Senior Business Development Executive at Infosys BPO in Dallas.

Doris “D.J.” Jones (’84) earned All-Gulf South Conference honors in both volleyball (1982, 1983, 1984) and softball (1984) at UNA while helping lead the Lions to three GSC Championships. A native of Houston, Texas, Jones was a three-year standout at UNA from 1982-84 and was also a two-year starter in softball in 1983 and 1984. She is one of just five UNA athletes to ever be named All-GSC in two different sports. UNA had a 91-29 record during her three years in the volleyball program, winning GSC titles in 1982 and 1984. She was team MVP three straight years. The Lions also won the 1983 GSC Softball Championship. She earned a Bachelor of Social Work (BSW) degree from UNA and has added a Master of Education degree as well as Project Management Professional Certification. She is employed as Director of Medicaid Programs for Telligen in Austin, Texas.

Evan Oglesby (’07) earned All-GSC and All-American honors as a defensive back with the Lions before spending six seasons in the National Football League. Oglesby was selected All-GSC and All-American as a junior in 2003 and helped lead the Lions to a 13-1 record that included the first perfect 11-0 regular-season in school history, a GSC championship and a spot in the semi-finals of the Division II playoffs. As a senior in 2004, he was selected All-GSC, All-South Region and All-American and played in the Cactus Bowl Division II All-Star Game. A native of Toccoa, Ga., he originally signed as a free agent with the Buffalo Bills before playing with the Baltimore Ravens from 2005-06, the Dallas Cowboys in 2007, Baltimore again in 2008 and the Miami Dolphins from 2009-10. In all he played in 38 career NFL games. He currently develops athletic performance programs for youth, focusing primarily on speed training.

The late Alex Sloan started the men’s golf program at UNA in 1958 and served as the team’s coach for 16 years, through the 1973 season. Sloan not only laid the foundation for what today is one of the school’s most successful programs, but also led the Lions to great successes.

In 1962 UNA golfer Greg Lewis qualified for the NAIA National Tournament as an individual. The Lions won Alabama Collegiate Conference Championships under Sloan in 1961 and 1962. The Lions finished with a 17-1 record in 1969, winning the ACC and NAIA District 27 championships. The Lions had a combined 64-11-2 match record from 1967-70. In addition to his work with the Lions golf program, Sloan was appointed as the Head Professional at Florence Country Club in 1957 and later accepted the position of Head Professional at the Turtle Point Yacht and Country Club. In all, Sloan spent more than fifty years teaching golf to players of all skill levels.
UNA FOOTBALL LOCKER LEGACY

All University of North Alabama football alumni are invited to participate in the Locker Legacy program, which provides annual support for the UNA football team’s equipment and capital needs.

In 2015, with the help of the Locker Legacy program, new meeting rooms for the football team were built in Self Field House. These meeting rooms were much needed and have proved to be of great benefit to the program.

As a former UNA football player, you created a legacy when you played for the Lions and we would like for you to leave your legacy each year with the current football team.

For $120 a year you can have your name, position, number, and years of play inscribed and mounted on the locker of a current UNA football player. You will have the opportunity to renew your plaque each year. This not only shows your past commitment to the program, but also your current support of UNA Lion Football.

We want to enhance the experience of our current student athletes, and with your help, we can continue to make this happen. This year, all money raised from Locker Legacy will go towards the purchase of new football uniforms for our team.

To participate in the Locker Legacy program, contact Megan Lovelace at smlovelace@una.edu or at (256) 765-4615.

WINGO WAS FINALIST FOR 2015 HARLON HILL TROPHY

University of North Alabama senior quarterback Luke Wingo of Tuscaloosa, Ala., finished sixth in the voting for the 2015 Harlon Hill Trophy as the NCAA Division II College Football Player of the Year. Wingo received five first-place votes and 32 total points in the voting by the Division II sports information directors. Ferris State (Mich.) University senior quarterback Jason Vander Laan claimed the Harlon Hill Trophy for the second straight year with 217 total points.

Wingo led UNA to a 9-3 record and into the second round of the Division II Playoffs this season. He is sixth nationally in passing efficiency with a 162.8 rating after throwing for 3,203 yards and 25 touchdowns. He completed 231 of 343 passes and also rushed for eight touchdowns.

A four-year starter at UNA, Wingo led UNA to a share of the Gulf South Conference Championships and was previously selected first-team All-GSC and the GSC Offensive Player of the Year.

He is UNA’s all-time leader in total offense (9,532) and most touchdowns responsible for (94) and is second in career passing yards (8,374), career touchdown passes (60), and career pass completions (554). He is also tied for fourth in UNA history in career rushing touchdowns (34).

Wingo’s selection marked the 10th time that a North Alabama student-athlete has been a finalist for the Hill Trophy, named for the UNA alumnus. The Lions’ Ronald McKinnon ‘09 won the Hill Trophy in 1995, as did Will Hall ‘04 in 2003. The most recent UNA finalist was quarterback Lee Chapple ‘11 in 2011.

LIONS EARN THREE GSC TITLES IN THE FALL

For the first time in Gulf South Conference history, one school claimed the league’s championships in football, women’s soccer, and men’s soccer, and volleyball in the same fall season as the University of North Alabama laid claim to all three in 2015. The UNA football team went 9-3 and earned a tie with West Georgia for the 2015 GSC title. It was UNA’s 12th football title, which is the most by any program in league history.

In women’s soccer, the Lions went 15-3-2 and claimed both the GSC regular-season and tournament championships. In volleyball, UNA was 26-8 and downed West Florida 3-2 in the GSC Tournament championship match. It was the Lions’ 17th GSC volleyball crown, which is 13 more than any other program in conference history.

MAYHALL IS ACADEMIC ALL-AMERICA, AGAIN

University of North Alabama junior wide receiver Lee Mayhall of Jackson, Tenn., has been named to the 2015 College Sports Information Directors of America (CoSIDA) Academic All-America® Division II Football Team for the second straight year.

Mayhall, who has a 3.97 cumulative grade point average in Industrial Hygiene, is one of just 24 players from the 168 Division II schools to be named first-team Academic All-America®.

A first-team All-Gulf South Conference selection this season, Mayhall had 49 pass receptions in 2015 for 539 yards and three touchdowns. He closed his career at UNA with 131 catches for 1,580 yards and ranks fifth in school history in pass receptions and ninth in receiving yards. A four-year letterman and three-year starter, Mayhall was a member of three consecutive Gulf South Conference Championship teams and the Lions advanced to the NCAA Division II Playoffs in 2013, 2014 and 2015.

A second-team All-GSC pick as a junior, Mayhall is also a two-time Academic All-Gulf South Conference and CoSIDA Academic All-District pick as well.
FOOTBALL LIONS TO OPEN 2016 SEASON AT JACKSONVILLE STATE

The University of North Alabama will open its 2016 football season on the road on Thursday night, September 1, against the 2015 Football Championship Subdivision national runner-up Jacksonville State to kick off a 10-game schedule for the Lions.

UNA, coming off a 9-3 season that saw the Lions win a share of a third straight Gulf South Conference Championship and advance to the NCAA Division II Playoffs for a third straight year, will face its oldest rival in a JSU team that went 13-2 a year ago, losing to Auburn in double-overtime and to North Dakota State in the FCS Championship Game.

The UNA-JSU rivalry dates back to the first game of the Lions’ modern football era in 1949 and continued until the Gamecocks left Division II following the 1992 season. The two schools have only met twice since then, with UNA taking a 28-16 win in 2003 and JSU winning 24-21 in two overtimes in 2013. The 2013 game drew a crowd of almost 21,000.

This year’s game will kickoff at 6 p.m. at Burgess-Snow Field at JSU Stadium in Jacksonville.

UNA returns 43 lettermen, including 17 starters and eight All-GSC performers from last season. The 2016 Lion squad will include 27 seniors.

With a 34-12 win at Valdosta State on October 3, 2015, University of North Alabama Head Football Coach Bobby Wallace passed Hal Self to become the winningest football coach in school history. Self won 109 games over 21 seasons with the Lions from 1949-69 and Wallace earned his 110th win against the Blazers last season.

Wallace was recognized for the accomplishment in a ceremony prior to UNA’s 2015 Homecoming game that included representatives of both the Self and Wallace families.

Wallace now has 115 wins in just 14 seasons at UNA and has led the Lions to six Gulf South Conference Championships, nine NCAA Division II Playoff appearances and three national championships. Wallace also ranks as the winningest football coach in Gulf South Conference history with 141 wins in 19 seasons in the league.
